

Call for Papers for the Política Internacional Academic Journal – Issue 138 (2025-II)

“Latin America facing the new challenges of global governance: between convergence or fragmentation”

The Diplomatic Academy of Peru "Javier Pérez de Cuéllar" (ADP) cordially invites active and retired diplomatic officials, national and international academics and specialists, as well as postgraduate students, to submit articles for consideration for publication in Issue No. 138 (2025-II) of the journal Política Internacional.

The theme of this issue will be “Latin America and the new challenges of global governance: between convergence or fragmentation.” This edition aims to reflect on Latin America's role in contemporary global governance, which is marked by the resurgence of great power rivalries, the emergence of new actors with growing influence on the global balance of power, the weakening of international institutions, and the rise of new transnational challenges. Contributors are invited to examine how the region is responding to phenomena such as the crisis of multilateralism, the rise of regional blocs, climate diplomacy, international migration, cybersecurity, growing economic protectionism, among others.

In this context, the region is characterized by significant internal fragmentation—both political and social—that limits its capacity for joint action and reduces its influence in global governance.

This progressive fragmentation is reflected in ideological differences, socioeconomic inequalities, and diverse national agendas that hinder the consolidation of a unified regional voice. In this regard, authors are encouraged to reflect on these challenges and the opportunities Latin America may find through resilient regional integration organizations which, despite facing difficulties, offer platforms for cooperation and coordination in the face of great power rivalries and the emergence of new global actors.

Submitted articles must be original, unpublished, and exclusive. Articles will be accepted in both Spanish and English.
